

*Seigh-Anne &
Iain McAlpine*

08 April 2006

Iain and I were engaged in the Shetland Isles. He proposed to me during a romantic picnic on top of a hill behind his family's old farmhouse; the view of the Fjords and the ocean was absolutely spectacular. I knew then that the choice of venue for our wedding would have a lot to live up to.

On the big day, two London cabs drew up at the hotel to take us to Oakfield Farm. As planned, Iain was blindfolded and led by his brother, Sven, to meet me on the charming, wooden bride beyond the Chapel forest. Trying to soak up each moment with every step, I walked along the bridge to meet him. I took off his blindfold and he saw me in my dress for the first time. It was a magical moment in time.

In true Scottish style about 40 minutes into our photo shoot, the heavens opened and poured down – in buckets! I tried to keep my composure and to make the most of it. Craig, our Oakfield superhero, was quick to come to the rescue with large umbrellas and, more importantly, champagne for the then irritable bride! Despite all, we have some great photographs with tartan umbrellas and lots of laughing people. And then, as we made our way to the Chapel, the sun started to stream through the trees again.

Photographer - Ansunette Ferreira
 Videographer - Red Squirrel
 Florist - Michael's Florist
 Décor - The Flower Lady
 Beading On Chandeliers - Della
 Make Up - Linda Degenaar
 Hair - Patricia Ridderhof
 Music - Transvaal Scottish Pipe Band
 DJ - Scott Macrae Of Radio 2000
 Bonbonniere & Stationery - Annabella
 Cake - The Chocolate Tier
 Dress - Gerhard Meiring

