Anton and Bernadette decided to have a small, intimate wedding and wanted to do something different for someone else on their special day—they wanted to share their happiness! They wanted to create a relaxed, fun-filled atmosphere for everyone—devoid of all the usual 'pomp and ceremony' associated with weddings.

Among their guests was a couple (Oom Johan and Tannie Let) who although ecstatic about their wedding, were heartbroken, having lost their son just six months earlier. Anton and Bernadette wanted to show them that even through the toughest adversity, there are people who they could count on and who cared for them.

Anton being the FANatical Blue Bulls supporter that he is, decided to have a Blue Bulls rugby jersey signed by Oom Johan's favourite player, Pierre Spies. Although Pierre could not present the jersey personally, he was kind enough to personalise it with Johan's name and reference to an appropriate Bible verse. This was presented to him during the speeches which became a real tear jerker. It was a humbling experience which showed that it's not the magnitude of the gesture that counts, it's the thought and love behind it.

From the quaint ceremony in the forest chapel, to the cosy ambience of the Summerhouse, they succeeded in making everyone a part of their entire day.
